

Dale's proposal is a well-considered "compromise" solution which (to my mind) makes laudable effort toward continuing to define 3 separate licence classes. However, he makes a valid point that under reciprocal licensing many amateurs from other countries might not be code-certified. In light of this complicating factor, the simple elimination of element 1 as a licensing requirement is probably the better choice.